THE GARTES OF THE AIR.

Everything that is startling and original in the way of a proposed improvement is regarded by some people with timidity. Conservatism half the time is only ignorance and indolence trying to screen elves. A need, too, may be strongly felt and the remedy for it lie right under one's eyes without ever being perceived. ## RECORD BREAKING.

Ealvator has had such a triumphant career this season that the public heard with some surprise of Banquet's exploit at Monmouth yesterday when he beat Salvator's record for a mile and a quarter by a second and a quarter.

This is interesting. Because a horse i a good game flyer on the track it is no rea son why one should not welcome with satisfaction his superior. The faster a horse can leave a mile behind him the better does the horse-racing lover like him, no matter what he is or where from. There lives not a horse so fine that to see his record lowered is not a desirable thing. So hur rah for Banquet!

Lorrin afterwards fired twice into his own head, but recovered.

For shooting at his mistress he wastried at the Palais de Justice. Lorrin captivated the jurymen by his poetical appearance, and his advocate fairly "fetched" them when he recited some of the young man's verses addressed to his inamorate after he had begun to suspect her fidelity, in which, with the usual hyperboles, he declared he could not live without her, and that one day he would be found hanging up behind the door.

POTATOES AND PRINCES.

An Old Vender, Who Knew a Good Thing and Took Advantage of It, Kings and princes are not of quite as much importance in the world as they once were, says the Youth's Companion, but it is still true that a certain amount of consequence may attach to their slightest actions. Some little time ago, on a Winter afternoon, the Prince of Wales, accompanied BROADWAY, Car. 14 TH ST., N. Y. CITY.

noon, the Prince of Wales, accommanied by another princely personage, paid the Queen a visit during one of her brief solourns in Buckingham Palace.

The two men left the palace on foot and passed through the streets. It was very cold and the princes felt their hands cold in their thin gloves. Just then they happened to pass the stand of an old man who gained a livelihood by selling hot baked potatoes on the sireet.

'Here," said the Prince of Wales, laughing, is a chance to warm our hands."

They stopped, bought four hot potatoes hands."

They stopped, bought four hot potatoes of the old man, thrust them into the side pockets of their overcosts, and went on warming their hands upon them.

The potato-seller had recognized his patrons, and shortly afterwards the passers-by were astonished and amused to see a large sign erested over his cart to see a large sign erected over his cart bearing the words:

PRINCE OF WALES.

The novelty of the title attracted a crowd, which increased and grew noisy when a policeman attempted to make the potato-seller remove the sign. The "merchant" insisted that as the Prince of Wales had patronized him he had a right to use the appellation.

The dispute threatened to be a long one and was clusing some embarrassment to the authorities, when the matter came to the ears of the Prince. He at once sent the potato-seller a considerable sum of money as a gift on condition that he would cease to display the sign.

The potato man accepted the money, the sign came down and all was once more quiet about his place of business.

The remarkable studies in sempambu lism and in the unlimited power of suggestion which have been carried out a Nancy open up another and a more serious set of questions touching the relations between hypnotism and crime, says the Saturday Review, These questions may be considered under three heads;

1. The observed phenomena of somnambulism (which is a hypnotic condition) show that somnambulists may unconsciously but spontaneously commit unlawful acts of which they have no knowledge and recollection when awake, In such cases, although really irresponsible and ignorant of what they have done, they may be held guilty and punished ac-

A similar case is related in a Malacca in the facts fully established, and Castellan sentenced to twelve years' hard labor.

All she remembered was being compelled to submit to him by an irresistable power.

Dr. Esdaile, a Scotch surgeon in India, and an expert measurerizer, had reason to suspect a native barber of kidnapping a boy under hypnotic influence. His suspicions were aroused by the boy's appearance. He tried experiments, which were rejected in court, and found he could make natives follow him involuntarily. The man was condemned to nine years' labor in irons.
